Chapter 1 by ShatteredStoriesAuthor

Mrs. Halrbinger screamed angrily as she paced back and forth. "He's cheating on me! I know that bastard husband of mine is cheating on me!" She pointed accusingly at the stack of papers on the little wooden desk in my equally as small office. "I showed you the transcript didn't !! He was ordering whores in our house! Talking about prices, colors, ages!"

I sighed this with the fifth time in as many days that she'd been in here and each time I ended up telling her the same thing, "Mrs. Halbringer." She cut me off with an angry wave.

"Ms. Good, I'll be using my maiden name when I divorce that son of a bitch, might as well start now!"

I resisted the urge to invade her mind and force her to sit down and shut up. I know that might seem harsh and extreme but you try repeating the same conversation with a paranoid eighty year old woman five freaking times in a row and see if your patience doesn't wear thin. "Ms. Good, as I was saying, we have investigated the transcripts and your husband was ordering wine, not whores. He does run a restaurant doesn't he?"

"Run?! He isn't even there, he's with his girlfriends living it up while I'm stuck at home fu-" I cringing at the thought of mental images that were about to destroy my psyche when my boss opened the door interrupting her.

"Ms. Good! I'm so glad I caught you before you left, we got good news our team of internet investigators just got back and discovered what your husband is up to. Why don't you walk with me and I'll explain it to you" My boss shot me a look of "Don't you say a word" as Mrs. Halbringer stood up and stormed. See more of Story Wars
